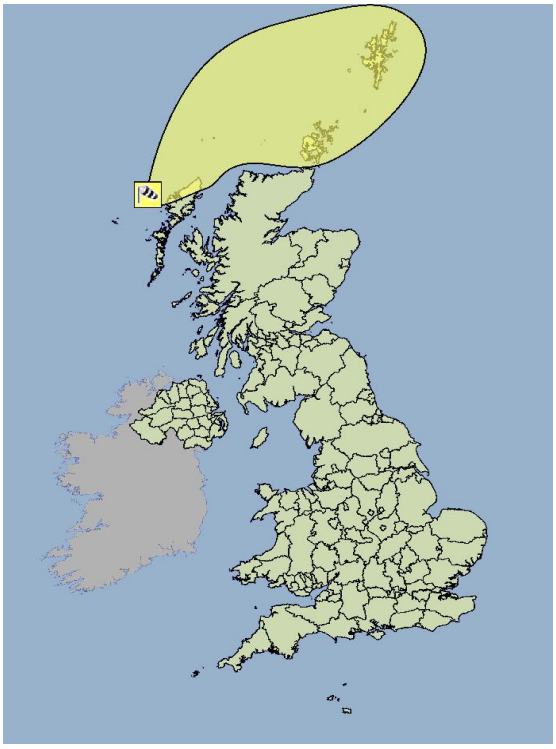
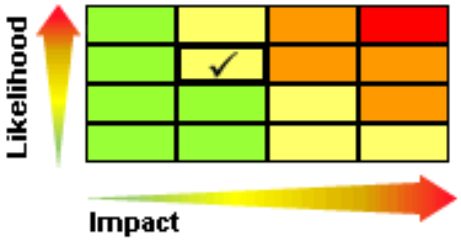
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Whilst Tuesday looks to be a windy day in general a core of stronger winds will bring isolated 70-75 mph gusts for some parts of the warning area in association with heavy showers.

These stronger winds will be short lived in any one location but some disruption is possible. At the same time some large waves will run onto exposed coasts bringing the chance of some spray and wave overtopping.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 10:00 on Tue, 14th Mar 2017 until 18:00 on Tue, 14th Mar 2017

Strong winds are expected on Tuesday with isolated gusts of 70-75 mph possible.

Some disruption to road and ferry transport is possible as well as some spray and wave overtopping for coastal areas.
